INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS FELLOWSHIPS

THE COUNCIL'S International Affairs Fellowships are awarded annually to between 10 to 14 promising young men and women from the age of 27 through 35 who are working in the field of international relations. Designed to provide professional experience contrasting with the Fellow's background, the program offers Fellows from the academic world an occasion to test their theories in a policy-oriented environment, and gives government officials an opportunity to consider problems in a scholarly atmosphere free from the pressures of daily decision-making.

The International Affairs Fellowships are funded by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and the Ford Foundation. Since the inception of the program in 1967, there have been 61 fellowship recipients, each chosen in a nationwide competition. During 1972-73, International Affairs Fellows and their projects were as follows:

WILLIAM H. BRANSON, of Princeton University: "Political Economy of United States Trade"

BARRY CARTER, of the National Security Council staff: "Decision-Making in United States Strategic Policy (1967-75)"

LOUIS W. GOODMAN, of Yale University: "Decision-Making in Multi-National Corporations in Latin America"

ROBERT J. LIEBER, of the University of California at Davis: "Dimensions of Community and Conflict: A Systematic Study of European-American Relations"

ABRAHAM F. LOWENTHAL, of the Ford Foundation: "Peru's Revolutionary Government of the Armed Forces"

EDWARD L. MILES, of the University of Denver: "The International Decision System for Ocean Exploration and Exploitation"

JEFFREY S. MILSTEIN, of Yale University: "The Uses and Limits of Quantitative and Systematic Analysis"

ALEJANDRO PORTES, of the University of Texas at Austin: "United States Immigration Policy: Effects on Latin America"

WILLIAM B. QUANDT, of the RAND Corporation: "The Development Process: Views of the American Foreign Policy Elite"

W. TAYLOR REVELEY, III, of Williams, Gay & Gibson, Richmond, Virginia:

"Constitutional Aspects of United States Participation in Foreign Conflicts"

WILLIAM RUGH, of the United States Information Agency: "The United States Viewed by the Arab Media"

PHILIPPE C. SCHMITTER, of the University of Chicago: "Fascism, Populism and Falangism"

FRANKLIN B. WEINSTEIN, of Cornell University: "The Impact of a Resurgent Japan on Southeast Asia"

During the year a number of Fellows attended meetings and study groups at the Harold Pratt House. Mr. Lowenthal's project led to the formation of a study group, of which he is secretary, on United States Policy-Making Toward Latin America, which will continue its meetings in 1973-74.

In February the Fellows assembled at the Harold Pratt House to discuss their work. Also attending this meeting were Fellows from previous years, members of the Advisory Selection Committee, Council board and staff.

In 1973 Alton Frye, now a Senior Fellow of the Council and Director of Special Projects and formerly an International Affairs Fellow, assumed the Directorship of the program. John Temple Swing, Vice President and Secretary of the Council, who has directed the program since its inception, will retain an active interest in it in his continuing role as Chairman of the Advisory Selection Committee.
